

Venus in Cancer...

When your Venus is in Cancer, you look for security and safety in a partnership. You are the most caring and nurturing of lovers. Your lover is likely to be highly flattered by your excellent memory for all they say and do—in some cases; he or she could be intimidated as well! Sincerity from your partner is very important to you, and you're most attracted to people who you consider to be natural and genuine. You are a highly intuitive lover, finding it easy to “read” your partner’s character and feelings. As mentioned above, this can be flattering to many, and a major cause of concern for others! Of course this is fine by you, because the ideal partner for you is relaxed, flexible, and comfortable in his own skin. Anyone at all threatened by your “feelers” will not be sincere enough for you down the road.

Appreciation, security, and tenderness at all times are most important to you in matters of the heart. You work hard at accommodating the people you love, taking care of them in every way you can. Because you are not very comfortable with confrontation, you are prone to side-stepping problems. You are easily hurt, but you work hard at concealing that fact. It is difficult for you to forget any kind of actions that you consider betrayals on the part of a lover, but you are also not one to run away from your commitments. You would benefit from expressing your hurts instead of letting them stew inside of you.

Your charm is of the understated kind, and you may not always know just how attractive you are to others! The truth is, no matter how you come across, you ooze sweetness to members of the opposite sex. Of course, not everyone will find that quality attractive, but to those that do, you will be irresistible. It can be difficult for some people to stay angry with you. This may be because you have mastered the “art” of playing innocent! You can be attracted to neediness, and you might work at keeping the people you love in a state of needing you. Their dependency on you feeds you, making you feel loved, but you can have a love-hate relationship with that dependency over the long haul. In some cases, Venus in Cancer people might wonder if they’ve created a monster! You do get off on taking great care of your lover. You observe your partner very closely, and the love you offer holds the rare quality of cherishing. It would be helpful if you could detach yourself from some of the problems of your family, even just a little, and recognize that you are not responsible for others’ happiness. This concept is difficult for you to learn. You understand it, but living by it is a completely different thing.
